Liam Livingstone 42 (29b 4x6)

Umran Malik 4-0-56-1

4.13pm So, that's the end of a steady knock from England. It looks hefty by the standards of most venues, but believe me, England would have been more comfortable defending closer to 230. This pitch is true, the outfield is quick and the boundaries are short. There's a chance for India to cut loose in their first chase of the series.

Malan was England's batter of the day with 77 from 39: "It was nice, smaller ground than the overs and it came off nicely. I tried to get out every ball, but pace off on a good length was harder than the rest, pace on came on beautifully. The last two games we didn't create the partnerships, but today we had depth in the line-up to keep going. It's so tough here at TB, one guy has a day out ... 215 on the board we are confident, but we'll have to bowl well."

KK will be here shortly for the resumption.

Decent delivery, on a length, just outside off, and he frees his arms and launches it straight back over the bowler's head has faced six balls from Avesh in T20s this year, and has been dismissed by three of them. Wow.

3.6 AVESH KHAN TO MALAN, NO RUN
• Another slower ball, slanting across into the corridor, pitching just short of a length. Looks to stand tall and punch into the covers, and he's beaten by the lack of pace

Slip in place for Malan.

3.6 AVESH KHAN TO MALAN, 1 WIDE
1w Quick bouncer, ends up bouncing well over head height. Thought of hooking, then decided to abort the shot and watch the ball sail to the keeper

3.5 AVESH KHAN TO MALAN, NO RUN
• Length ball slanting across, and another inside-edge. Looks to swipe it through midwicket, and bottom-edges into his pads

Stays over the wicket to the left-handed Dawid Malan.

3.4 AVESH KHAN TO BUTTLER, OUT
W Bowled him. Was that a change of pace? 123kph, so it probably was. Not easy to pick. Length ball outside off, and Buttler looks to play the flat-

stumps off the inside edge

Shot! A bit of relief for Roy to 2.29pm Here we go then. Jason Roy and Jos Buttler will open again, no doubt relieved to look around the field and see no sign of Bhuvneshwar Kumar. Who takes the new ball then? It's going to be Avesh Khan. One wide-ish slip in place. Fine leg and third man are back.

2.20pm Thanks, Andrew. Interesting selections all round. With Hardik Pandya rested, India's entirely new-look attack will have to deal with the pressure of knowing each of the five bowlers will most likely have to send down four overs each - on a ground that often produces run-fests in white-ball cricket, and against a power-packed England line-up.

Shiva: "The problem with today's Indian team is that barring Jadeja, none of the batsmen can bowl and none of the bowlers is a decent batsman." -- Avesh Khan can tonk a few, to be fair. And Shreyas Iyer can bowl... sort of.

balance to the Indian team. Because they have chosen 5 bowlers only and no all rounder. In case of any one bowler being hit, they won't be able to do anything. They should have chosen either Hooda or Pandya I the team in place of Kohli." -- In general, I might agree, but you wouldn't want to give one of your major middle-order options just three balls in a series, that too right after he's spent so much time resting.

Nandagopal: "Disappointed with the lack of continuity with Indian XIs. Not sure how much of it is due to this being a back to back game!" -- Pretty hard to balance the demands of continuity and the demands of building towards a global tournament, so I think it's hard to fault India either way.

Sankalp Mukim: "Excited to see what Avesh and Umran bring as India's bench bowlers.... But sad to miss out on the beautiful swinging that Bhuvneshwar presents!!"

2.14pm Right, 15 minutes to go until the start. Time to hand over the controls to KK.

2.07pm So that's an intriguing toss, on several levels. England going against type by wanting to put runs on the board, and Rohit confirming he'd have been happy to field anyway. Four significant changes in the India line-up, with Malik's fiery pace the stand-out selection.

since September 2016 that England have won the toss in a T20I and chosen to bat... 26 bowl-first calls in a row until now!

On the bat first/chasing thing - England struggled batting first in the World Cup semi final against New Zealand and Buttler was asked before the series if they needed to bat first more often:

"Lots of people assume chasing is the way to go in T20 cricket, but on certain surfaces, batting first may be beneficial," he said. "Whether we bat or bowl first, I'm confident in the team, but I don't want us to get to a situation where we devalue games and think that they're all just practice matches, like 'let's do this because it might happen in six or 12 months' time'."

England win the toss and bat. "Hopefully a change in fortunes, with the sun out."

Salt comes in at No.4. Parkinson and Curran miss out, with Topley back. "We've been disappointed with the way we've batted, this is a chance to put it right," says Buttler.

Rohit Sharma confirms a raft of changes, including Bishnoi and Umran Malik... full changes coming up... Iyer, Avesh, Umran and Bishnoi for Hardik, Bhuvni, Bumrah and Chahal momentum, we understand the importance of winning games and the confidence that goes round the group."

Umran is "pretty exciting, he's shown he's got the skillset, just want to see how he responds to that international pressure."

England 1 Jason Roy, 2 Jos Buttler (captain/wk), 3 Dawid Malan, 4 Phil Salt, 5 Liam Livingstone, 6 Harry Brook, 7 Moeen Ali, 8 David Willey, 9 Chris Jordan, 10 Richard Gleeson, 11 Reece Topley

India 1 Rohit Sharma (captain), 2 Virat Kohli, 3 Suryakumar Yadav, 4 Rishabh Pant (wk), 5 Shreyas Iyer, 6 Dinesh Karthik, 7 Ravindra Jadeja, 8 Harshal Patel, 9 Avesh Khan, 10 Umran Malik, 11 Ravi Bishnoi

2pm Right, enough build-up, it's time for the toss...

1.48pm So, ten minutes or so until the toss... here's a quick recap of the fun and frolics from Saturday's contest at Edgbaston. Matt Roller zoomed in on the remarkable tale of Richard Gleeson, the ultimate international latecomer, who produced an outstanding three-wicket haul on debut. But ultimately he was outshone by the equally ageless Bhuvneshwar Kumar, whose old-school skills have been peerless in the series so far.

Dimkesh: "Rohit Sharma playing as a more refined Sunil Narine is the move that India 150 since he's turned captain. Not once has he been admonished for not converting them to fifties, simply because of how handy his early explosiveness is to the team."

Shiva: "Despite being the dead rubber, India should play with full strength as a part of world cup preparations. constant chopping and shuffling of the players is the main reason we are losing ICC tournaments. There is no role clarity and time to acclimatize to the roles."

Mustafa Moudi : "Ponting's record of most consecutive International Wins under threat. Hope Rohit equals his record tonight !!" Indeed. It is 19 in a row across formats, which is quite something.

1.39pm So, the toss is coming up at 2pm ... which is exactly when two other notable sporting events get underway today... at Wimbledon and at The Red Bull Ring. And on the evidence of a similar clash of contests three years ago, we could be in for a humdinger...

UmeshD: "Since India have won the series, I'd love to see Umran Malik in bowling line-up for India. Nothing would be better to let him rip in a dead rubber and boost his confidence." That would be fun! Make it so...

Aarush Luthra: "Can't explain how much I want Umran to play but as far as I believe, with his pace, he might travel more than what he usually does. And that may be do more bad than good.." It's a fair point. That pick-up into the Bridgford Rd stand can dent the most upstanding of quicks. Just ask Trent Boult and Neil Wagner!

1.32pm Whatever happens today, it's fair to assume this match will be another monstrous run-fest - Trent Bridge has been a riotous venue for high-scoring in recent years, perhaps most notably in ODIs, with England's 444 and 481 both coming here in recent seasons, but also in last year's T20I against Pakistan, when both teams posted 200-plus totals. Much as Afeef puts it in fact:

"Trent Bridge is usually full of runs. England's 2nd and 3rd highest ODI totals were made here, Birmingham made 261/2 in a T20 innings over here a few weeks ago. And last year on this ground, Livingstone scored his maiden T20I hundred against Pakistan, and what a knock that was. Looking forward to another high-scoring clash!"

Sahil: "Its good that Kohli had a long net, at least he is batting somewhere for long enough durations." And there I was thinking the Salt was in the England team...

1.23pm Matt Roller, our man in Nottingham, says: "Another scorching day in Nottingham, expecting another sold-out whacked here last year against Pakistan) and Curran, and will bring Salt and Topley in."

Kohli starting the day with a long net, been in there 20 mins or so, Matt adds.

1.19pm Afternoon all. We're at Trent Bridge for the third installment of the T20I series between England and India. And it's been a thoroughly dominant display from the visitors so far. Two thumping wins, built on full-throttle batting and outstanding bowling, not least from Bhuvneshwar Kumar, whose new-ball skills have consistently derailed England's hard-hitters in the Powerplay. Can India make it a clean sweep today?
